RedVision and Qualia Announce Service Integration

Parsippany, N.J. – March 7, 2017 – RedVision, a leading national provider of title and real property research solutions, and Qualia, a cloud-based settlement software company enabling faster closings, announced the integration of their respective services.

This seamless integration enables Qualia's settlement service customers access to national property title research solutions through RedVision's production platform, TitleVision®. This collaboration empowers Qualia's users to streamline order processing and production across all fifty states.

"At RedVision, we are continually seeking innovative ways to make title and real estate research activities more efficient for our clients," said Brian Twibell, president of RedVision. "This integration with Qualia enables users to automate and streamline the property research process through a single interface. This strategic alliance enables our customers to service their current clients more efficiently and effectively in addition to opening doors for new revenue opportunities."

"We are excited to partner with RedVision, a company with similar customer-centric objectives for helping title agents succeed through innovative technology," said Qualia CEO Nate Baker. "This integration allows our users to automate and streamline the title search process, saving time and reducing risk on every transaction."

This integration between the systems allows Qualia's agents to effortlessly receive RedVision's best-practice nationwide title evidence packages and search solutions and achieve industry-leading service level agreements directly through Qualia without having to manage multiple vendors and processes for procuring and processing their title search information.

About RedVision
